WONDERFUL RAIMENT IS SEEN ON BEACH OF FAMOUS RESORT

Marvelous Hosiery and Strange Pantalettes Meet the Eye of the Beholder at the Bathing Hour at Atlantic City—Cape May News

ATLANTIC CITY, July 5. NOW that the resort is crowded with happy humanity, the season has arrived when the Strand portrays wonderful styles in surf robes. The biggest novelty in aqueous raiment yesterday was the pantalette bathing suit built of crisp black taffeta with abbreviated skirt, from which peeped frilled knickerbockers. Few garments are free from stripes. Some were built entirely of striped materials and others were of plain blue or black silk or mohair with striped collars, cuffs and hosiery.

CAPE MAY, July 5. The Fourth was a red-letter day in Cape May. It isn't every seashore resort that can boast of three submarines and two battleships, the U. S. S. Vixen and the U. S. S. Bushnell. They were here in full regalia, making the town a picturesque sight with their officers in immaculate white uniforms.

Of course, the ships were anchored in the harbor and the Corinthian Yacht Club members did everything within their power to entertain the officers in royal style. The enclosed porch was gay with luncheon parties. At 2 o'clock the parade drew sturdy fathers, in white flannels, from the golf links; pretty mothers, in pink sweaters, and little Mary and brother John were allowed to miss their afternoon naps for the big event. The beach was lined with people for blocks, and motors, filled with men and women, were parked in every possible spot near the Stockton Baths. There were floats of every description, depicting poor old George Washington, Uncle Sam, the Goddess of Liberty and many other old friends.
